Justin knows he's a lucky guy. He might live with his parents and work at their winery, but he's an omega living in a community of alphas and omegas. He doesn't have to hide who he is, he's got a great job doing something that he loves and he lives in some of the most beautiful country in the world. The problem is that once Aaron, a local alpha, declared his interest, none of the other local alphas were willing to get in Aaron's way. It doesn't matter that Justin's not interested in Aaron; as long as Aaron refuses to take Justin's "no" for an answer, Justin will have to stay single.

When an injured alpha staggers in, carrying a small child with him, Justin isn't thinking about mating or about Aaron. He thinks that Eric is someone who needs help. Eric has escaped something terrible down in West Virginia, and lost his mate in the process. If Justin gets a little attached, that's only natural. When Aaron's jealousy starts to endanger Eric and his child, will Justin have to make a desperate choice to save them?
